Police inspector: What is your name?
Harry: Harry Hartley.

Police inspector: What do you do?
Harry: I’m Sir Thomas Vandeleur’s private secretary.

Police inspector: Why are you here?
Harry: I’m here because Sir Thomas Vandeleur accuses me of stealing his wife’s diamond jewels. But I didn’t do it!

Police inspector: Why don’t you tell me what happened?
Harry: It all started when Lady Vandeleur gave me a hatbox one morning. She told me to take it to a man she knows. She said I had to get a receipt for it before leaving the hatbox at the man’s house.

Police inspector: Did she tell you what was in the hatbox?
Harry: No, she didn’t. Since it was none of my business, I didn’t ask.

Police inspector: Go on, then.
Harry: I took the hatbox and decided to walk through Kensington Gardens. There I saw Sir Thomas, who was very angry. He even tried to hit me with his walking stick!

Police inspector: Why didn’t you try to find a policeman after Sir Thomas attacked you?
Harry: Who would believe my word against Sir Thomas’s?

Police inspector: Then what did you do?
Harry: I went back to Sir Thomas’s house and he made me come here with him. I tell you, I’m innocent!

Police inspector: I must admit, you do seem to be telling the truth, Mr Hartley. But there’s only one way to find out if what you say is true. We must go back to that man’s house together. If the facts fit your story, then I’ll know you’re not lying, Mr Hartley. And now, let’s be off!

1 He closed the curtains and sat down at the table.
2 He gave him the smaller pile of diamonds.
3 He told him to leave and not come there again, then pushed him into the street.
4 Because Harry fell to the ground, the diamonds fell from his pocket and a man picked most of them and ran off.
5 He had to tell his story to a police inspector.
6 Because he knew that Mr Raeburn was a dishonest man.
7 It helped him find out how Harry got into the garden.
8 Because he noticed something buried under the roses.

I got this scar 30 years ago, when I was hunting diamonds in Africa. I was very happy one day because I found the largest diamond I ever saw. That night I decided to go to a restaurant to celebrate with my brother, Sir Thomas. We sat at a table together and ordered two steaks and boiled potatoes. A very large man sat at the table next to ours. He had thick, black hair and cold, mean eyes. An empty bottle of wine was on the table next to his arm. Clearly, he was drunk. ‘Heard you found a big one today,’ said the man. ‘Quite right,’ I answered. The man sat up and said, ‘Let’s make a deal. I have a sword I always carry with me. As you see, there’s another sword hanging on the wall there. You can have that one. Then we’ll go outside and have a sword fight. If I pierce you first with my sword, you’ll give me your diamond. If you pierce me first with your sword, I’ll give you this diamond.’ He took out his diamond and let me look at it. It was a large diamond, but nothing compared to the one I had in my pocket! I agreed to fight him. I was sure he couldn’t win since he was drunk. Well, you might think he won since I have this scar across my nose. Wrong! I pierced the man’s arm first. This made him so angry that he managed to slash my nose before my brother, Sir Thomas, stopped him. But I don’t mind having this scar since two large, precious diamonds are certainly better than just one!

1 He suggested him to go to Australia and buy a farm. 2 He was unsure about what he wanted to do with the diamond. 3 He thought: ‘If I look at it any longer, I’ll want to keep it’. 4 Because the prince was accused of stealing the Rajah’s Diamond. 5 He decided to serve the Rajah and did many bad things for him. In the end, the Rajah gave the diamond to Sir Thomas to thank him. 6 The prince and Francis. 7 He threw it into the Seine. 8 He thought the police chief wouldn’t put the prince in prison. 9 John and Thomas Vandeleur. 10 Because they looked in the wrong part of the river.
